The consolidation Coal Co., the gigantic corporation building Jenkins, the 10,000 population mining town in the valley of Elkhorn Creek, in the Elkhorn Coal fields of this county, announces that they will begin at once the construction of another mammoth mining town on Potters Fork of Boone, at the terminus of the Lexington & Eastern railroad, now being rapidly constructed into the coal fields. The new town on Potters Fork will shortly be laid off. Two large mills to manufacture the lumber are to be installed at once, and it is expected by the management to have the building operations well under way by the middle of summer. One of the mills is the large band mill of J. Proctor, now located at Bilvia above here, which will be moved to the place within a few days.

The Consolidation Coal Co. recently purchased 100,000 acres of coal lands from the Great Northern Coal & Coke Co., for which they paid an immense amount of money, and at the time made the announcement that they would spend $40,000,000 in the development of the Elkhorn section. A little later a contract was let for the construction of 30 miles of the Big Sandy and Elkhorn railroad out from Shelby Station on the Chesapeake & Ohio to the scene of their operations at Jenkins, the work upon which is now being rapidly rushed. Within six months it is said the road will be completed, in operation and shipping out thousands of tons of coal. Hundreds of carpenters are now rushing work on the construction of the miners houses at Jenkins, and where, a few days ago was almost a veritable forest, a modern Connellsville is to spring up. It will be known as the most rapidly growing town in the United States. Within six months the town is destined to have ten thousand people at least, and when the steps that are being taken are given consideration no one can doubt but that their plans will be fully realized.

The town to be built on Potters Fork will be a close second to Jenkins on Elkhorn. Millions of dollars will be expended in the developments at Jenkins alone.

SERGEANT, KY.

During the past week two of Letcher county's oldest people have surrendered to the "grim reaper."

Uncle Edward Combs, aged 92 years, a veteran citizen of the county and one of its oldest men died at his home near the mouth of Colly below here Thursday evening after a long illness of lagrippe, etc. Uncle Ed, as he was usually known, leaves a good many descendants all over the county, the Combs family being a very extensive one.

Sunday morning Uncle John B. Day died on Big Cowan creek near Whitesburg in the 90th year of his age, after a brief illness. His wife, a year his junior, survives him. Uncle John was the father of the extensive Day family of the county and leaves hundreds of descendants over the county. He was the father of H. T. Day, real estate dealer, and the grand father of D. I. Day, leading Whitesburg attorney.

James Clifton, foreman on Mellon & George Bros. railroad contract here, went to Knott county where he was married to Miss Sarah Combs, an enterprising young woman, Saturday, returning here Monday to resume his duties. This is his second venture.

The draught is growing quite severe throughout this section. All garden vegetables, potatoes, early corn, in fact most all vegetation is needing rain very severely. Disastrous forest fires are said to be burning in different places in Cumberland mountains. At night the fire can be seen for many miles. If rain doesn't come soon conditions will become alarming.
